In exercising its discretionary power in this respect, the Court shall take into account the possible prejudice to the accused and whether the prejudicial effect of the evidence may outweigh its probative value. The Court shall, in addition, take into account any pressures which may have been put on the witness whose evidence has been visually recorded, not to attend Court to give evidence.

(2) The Court, in the exercise of its powers referred to in section 10(4), may order that parts of the visually recorded evidence or the typed transcript of the sound track shall be omitted if it considers that such parts are not admissible or if it otherwise considers it expedient to do so.

13. Where any visually recorded evidence is taken under section 10, the person whose evidence has been visually recorded shall be called as a witness by the party which required such evidence to be adduced and subject to the provisions of section 19 he shall be made available for cross-examination. (2) Without prejudice to the generality of subsection (1) above, the following measures may be taken for the purpose of protecting the victim and witnesses, that is to say –

22.-(1) Subject to the following provisions of this section, the Court may, upon the application of a family member, a police officer, a family counsellor or of any other person acting on their behalf, make an interim order excluding from the family residence a person suspected of committing an act of violence, or removing therefrom a minor alleged to have been the victim of an act of violence to a place of safety or into the custody of the Chief Officer until such time as the suspect has been charged with and tried for the alleged act of violence or until a decision has been taken not to charge the suspect.

(3) At any time while an exclusion order is in force, the person charged may apply to the Court for the revocation or modification of the order and after hearing representations from the person charged and from any other interested party the Court may make such Order as it deems fit.

(2) Where an offender consents to undergo treatment for self-control and to comply with such other conditions as may be deemed necessary to prevent the commission by him of further acts of violence, the Court may, instead of imposing a sentence of immediate imprisonment upon him, suspend such sentence under the provisions of the Suspended Sentences of Imprisonment Ordinance.
